

Educational Program Intern

The Educational Program at APOYO is seeking candidates for an internship during the 2026 summer academic term. The three-month internship starts on June 22, 2026. Work dates and hours may be flexible to accommodate the intern's schedule. The internship offers a $1,000 stipend. APOYO can assist interns who want to earn academic credit; however, the intern must make the ultimate arrangements with their academic advisor and meet the program requirements. A minimum of 12 work hours per week is required, with up to 20 hours per week available. (Additional hours may be available depending on APOYO's needs and the intern's interests.)

OVERVIEW

This internship offers youth the opportunity to grow as leaders in environmental stewardship, sustainability education, and racial justice advocacy. Interns will receive hands-on experience in community organizing, outdoor programming, and youth engagement, while exploring the intersections of nature access, cultural identity, and equity. Participants will help design and lead nature outings for Spanish- and English-speaking participants, sustainability workshops, and creative activities that empower Latinx families and build solidarity across Ellensburg. The program also includes mentorship, leadership development, and opportunities to explore career pathways in conservation, education, and social justice. College students are currently encouraged to apply. The ideal candidate is organized and dependable; creative and culturally aware; passionate about nature, sustainability, and racial equity; skilled in communication in both English and Spanish (written, oral, or visual); and excited to engage youth and build community through outdoor experiences.

ABOUT US

APOYO is a non-profit organization that has been affiliated with Central Washington University since 1998. Its mission is to empower people by providing vital resources, advocacy, education, and opportunities to build community.

The Education Program is a new program at APOYO funded by The Nature Conservancy. This program focuses on engaging and educating youth and families in environmental stewardship, sustainability, access to nature, and cultural empowerment. Aventureros de APOYO is all about discovery – from experiences in nature and exploring careers and colleges to hands-on learning and connecting with the community. Every activity opens a door to something new and exciting, and everyone has a place on the journey.
